OSCAR BROWN JR.
A GREAT ENTERTAINER

BY ED WATKINS

Oscar Brown Jr. sang some soul-stirring lyrics to the music of Scott Joplin's "The Entertainer" the other night at an NYU "Highlights in jazz" concert, and by the time he had sung, acted and danced it, the song was his for all time. Oscar is indeed an entertainer for all seasons and has come a long way from his early days in Chicago.

Alongside him during the first part of his 90-minute show was his talented wife, Jean Pace. She was particularly moving singing "If I Only Had" from their own off-Broadway musical "Joy" of some years back. She also gave her all to "Afro Blue" and "Beat Me, Daddy" before literally flipping her wig in the finale number.

Frank Owens participated on piano—a distinct musical asset. Oscar then introduced David Langston-Smirl, a young man with whom he's collaborating on a new musical called "Silly Celebration." The two of them delivered the title song with great verve, and David was very funny in a number about "The Zipper."

When you get right down to the nitty-gritty, though, it was Oscar who carried the day with his show-stopping, virtuoso pieces like "But I Was Cool," "Rags and Old Irons" and "Signifyin' Monkey." (Kids in the audience, including one named Joshua sitting beside me, really dug that one!)

I also admired Oscar's putting to music "No Place to be Somebody," the title of that Pulitzer-Prize-winning play by Charles Gordon. It made NYU the place to be somebody, and Jack Klein singer, who produces these concerts certainly filled the shoes of Night Club Impresario that night!

And how do you follow an act like Oscar Brown? Well, Blossom Dearie did it, coming fresh from her gig over at Reno Sweeney. Jazz pianist, composer and "Chantoozie," she's a cool cat who can really chantooze. She laid 'em in the aisles with her delicately sexy "Pro Musica Antiqua" and "Peel Me a Grape," climaxing a show which had Klein singer and everyone around him smiling happily.
Voices of Jazz,
"Absolutely Wonderful"
Jack Kleinsinger and the NYU Program Board did their thing again at NYU Loeb Student Center Wed., April 21. It was really as they said, "Voices of Jazz" echoing from the sensational Oscar Brown, Jr. (actor-singer) and Company, which included his very talented wife Jean Pace, and Blossom Dearie, vocalist-pianist.
Oscar Brown, Jr., and his wonderful supporting cast really did entertain us, and so did Blossom. She projects Oscar Brown, Jr., never performed better.

Natalie Cole
Blossom Dearie is very petite and gets her songs over beautifully. She's very warm and makes a great stage presentation. I'm very much in love with Blossom's style of phrasing on the piano. I hope to hear Miss Dearie one day with her own rhythm section swinging like crazy.

We wish Oscar Brown, Jr., and Company—Blossom Dearie, many happy returns to the stage in Fun City. The house was packed with a very receptive and appreciative audience. We loved every minute of the concert.

Voices of Jazz: A "one of a kind" song stylist, Blossom Dearie, will be joined by concert star Oscar Brown Jr. in "Voices of Jazz," Jack Kleinsinger's Highlights in Jazz concert Wednesday at 8 p.m. at NYU's Loeb Student Center at Washington Square South. Tickets are $5, students $4 and $2.50 student balcony.
