Historical / Biographical Note

Reflecting on Florence Nightingale, the Pioneer of Modern Nursing
Joanelle Wood Mulrain | Artist – painter, photographer, author

As I picked up my brush, camera and pen once again in my mid-50s, little did I know how the path chosen for its unfettered wear and tear was to be so extraordinary. As a mother of two grown men whose characters and personae reflect some of my most treasured traits, my journey as an artist doggedly interested in the character and persona of Florence Nightingale (1820-1910) had begun. It lit a fire of which consumed me to complete a suite of eight paintings depicting her life and times; to collect and secure two Legacy Towers of related ephemera; and to challenge myself to research this woman of influence from the halls of the Library of Congress to her touch points in England order to gather the visual tools necessary to complete this most personal artistic task. From the opening of my international exhibit at the Anthropological Museum of Panama with a U.S. Embassy Grant as guest artist of the U.S. Ambassador followed by the personal honor of being asked to be an Artist in Residence at Claydon House, a leading National Trust property in England, I continued on my quest. I was welcomed by the curator along with Lord and Lady Verney at Claydon House. I delved into raw history in the archived cases and drawers, painted in the carriage house, walked the grasses in the early morning when the birds landed perfectly on the trout stream, and walked two miles up the hill to fetch food for my little flat in the house overlooking the 1742 courtyard. I experienced another time and place as I walked the halls of this most beautiful estate looking through windows where Florence spent so much time in her corner apartment while visiting her sister, Lady Parthenopy Verney. The owners of Nightingale's childhood home at Lea Hurst also welcomed me. It was here that I slept in Florence's childhood bedroom overlooking the daffodils in the garden only to experience the volcanic eruption from Iceland of which brought an eerie quiet hush over the English country side for weeks. From BBC interviews to working with curators, I delved deeply into Nightingale's history only to find more mystery as I documented specific items and places for my paintings to share what I envisioned as the most important life points of this pioneer of modern nursing and to paint what it must have been like for her as a child, a young woman during war, a leader in the field, and a global legacy. I think of my mother Nelle Beryl Rucker Wood, a Registered Nurse; my mother-in-law Mina Mulrain, an artist; my boys, Jeffry Arthur Mulrain Jr. and John Wood Mulrain. This is my legacy, and I am so honored for this exhibit to be housed at The Carpenter Library at the University of North Florida to inspire and create curiosity in the minds of the nursing students and others as they, too, learn about Miss Florence Nightingale. SPECIAL THANKS TO DR. DIANE RAINES, DR. JEAN WATSON AND DR. DAVID KARPELES WHO HELD THE TORCH ON THE PATH DURING THIS JOURNEY

Scope and Content Note

This collection contains artifacts, biographical information, correspondence, newspaper clippings, photos, printed material, and research. These items were gathered by the Jacksonville, Florida artist Joanelle Mulrain, in preparation for and exhibition of her work honoring the founder of modern nursing, Florence Nightingale, on the 100 anniversary of her death. The seven original exhibit paintings, along with other rare items collected by Joanelle Mulrain, are on permanent display in The Brooks College of Health. The Art of Caritas, additional artwork created by Joanelle Mulrain to enhance the mosaic honoring Florence Nightingale, can be found in special collections.
