If your fancy would be for a picture of a charming and mannered little English world which has long since been tucked away in ancient haircloth trunks—a quaint but lively world in which young laides were mainly concerned with dances and ribboned bonnets and the light in a guardsman's eye, and matrons had the vapors and worried only about marrying off their eligible daughters— then "Pride and Prejudice" is for you.

Gene Hackman and Al Pacino meet on a deserted road in northern California. One has just been released from jail and is on his way to Pittsburgh, Pa., to open a car wash. Hackman and Pacino form a partnership and they continue together toward their dream. Their strange cross-country adventures, by way of freight trains, hitchhiking and plain old walking, are a remarkable blend of humor and pathos, funny and shattering at the same time.
