Transportation and Logistics Flagship Program

The T&L Flagship Program offers a unique academic program that prepares students for careers in supply chain management, international logistics, transportation, materials management, and physical distribution.

Firms are actively seeking out logistics majors to capitalize on the unique set of skills required to manage logistics systems in the supply chain. The rapid increase in international trade has accelerated the demand for individuals capable of delivering innovative logistics based solution worldwide. Graduates of the program are employed by transportation and logistics firms in the region, large retailers and distributors with highly developed logistics functions, and major national and international corporations.

“This program is of the highest caliber, with the potential to draw talented students from around the world, tackle cutting-edge research projects and help solve problems facing today’s businesses.”
