Sound Advice

• It's too late to see "A Jazz Nativity," the poignant and spirited production staged by Anne Phillips and Bob Kindred during the past weekend at St. Bartholomew's Church. But try to catch The New York Voices, a vocal quintet that added warmth and spice to that flavorful show (and a post-performance party), when they perform on Dec. 23 at J's, Broadway near 97th Street.

• If you read this early enough, you can still make it to the living room of St. Peter's Church, Lexington at 54th Street, by 12:30 p.m. to hear Judy Niemack, a singer whose powerful savvy, ebullience and musicianship will be underpinned by the savoir faire of pianist/singer Ronnie Whyte.

• And singer Dakota Staton, a singular stylist, performs this evening, tomorrow evening and Saturday night with the Brass Townsend Trio at Marty's East, 209 E. 56th St. //
