Highlights in Jazz: A Bit More Structure

By NICHOLAS CATALANO

On February 2, Jack Kleinsinger celebrated the 16th anniversary of his popular series "Highlights In Jazz." The evening concert was more or less typical of others through the years — a round-up of available jazz talent who perform in jam session fashion with a loosely formatted theme. In recent years, the series has been heavily subscribed (tickets are $9) and last week's concert was sold out at the NYU Loeb Center.

The evening jam session was more structured than many of those in the past. Musicians included Clark Terry, Frank Wess, Major Holley, Ken Washington, Niels Lan Doky, Barney Kessel and Ron Cuber. In contrast to the more impromptu gatherings of the past, the opener "Just Friends" provided nicely wrought harmony by Wess's tenor and Cuber's baritone underneath the trumpet melody of Terry. An amusing blues, "My Gal," was narrated by Terry and, later on, Major Holley continued the comic interludes with a rendition of Slim Gaillard's "Get That Jive Jack."

Classic tunes like "Caravan" and "I Hear a Rhapsody" were given fresh outings with inspired improvisations by Ronnie Cuber and Frank Wess respectively. Sonny Rollins's "Oleo" instigated collaborations between Barney Kessel and bassist Lynn Seaton, which also included a comic monologue, which delighted the audience.

Running from September through May, the concerts are given monthly. The overflow crowd last week was just another signal sent out by New Yorkers who seem to be thirstier than ever for more jazz.
