Honors Luncheon for Outstanding Senior High School Young Women

Deborah Gianoulis is the inciteful and vivacious co-anchor of the 6:00 p.m. and 11:00 p.m. news at WJXT-TV, Channel 4, in Jacksonville. Ms. Gianoulis came to Jacksonville in June of 1976 immediately after receiving her B.A. degree from the University of Delaware and being named the "Outstanding Communications Graduate" of that year. Ms. Gianoulis signed on with WTLV in 1976, where she stayed for 2 years. In 1978 Ms. Gianoulis married a fellow reporter, David Heald, and moved to London, England where Mr. Heald had a scholarship. While in London Ms. Gianoulis worked as a free lance journalist. Upon her return to the states in 1979, Ms. Gianoulis joined WJXT-TV, where she has worked ever since.

During her career, Ms. Gianoulis covered such important events as the first space shuttle launching, the opening of EPCOT Center, the 1980 Republican Convention and she is scheduled to cover the 1984 Democratic Convention. Ms. Gianoulis also has a weekly public affairs program called "Four The Asking." In addition to her career responsibilities, Ms. Gianoulis has one son and lives at the beach.

The College and University Women's Public Leadership Consortium is dedicated to the provision of innovative programming for public leadership development and to the encouragement of women in public leadership roles. The Women's Consortium links four institutions of higher learning in the Jacksonville area: Edward Waters College, Florida Junior College, Jacksonville University and the University of North Florida. In 1980 the Women's Consortium sponsored a workshop on "Women in Public Leadership: Delimmas, Options, Strategies" with Marread Corrigan as the keynote speaker. Two workshops were presented in 1981: "Analyzing Power Structures for Leadership Effectiveness" and "Optimizing Women's Public Leadership Skills."
