Happy Birthday to Us!

In celebration of the 25th anniversary of the opening of UNF, members of the Library faculty are planning the university-wide birthday party scheduled for October 2. The Birthday Party Planning Committee, chaired by Geraldine Collins, consists of Eileen Brady, Diane Kazlauskas, Linda Smith and Barbara Tuck.

In attempting to perform such a large job, the committee enlisted the help of other University personnel who have expertise in planning such events. The committee is indebted to Anne Wall and Jodi Jones of Institutional Advancement, Becky Purser and Mike Weglicki of Arena facilities management and Jeanne Middleton of Alumni Services for their valuable assistance in planning what will be the main campus celebration of the anniversary year.

The party is October 2, from 11:30 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. in the UNF Arena Plaza. The committee plans a festive event that the entire campus community can enjoy. A luncheon buffet with hot and cold foods will be served in tents set up on the Arena grounds. Music will be provided by a UNF Jazz Combo. There will be a short formal program with Tom Healy serving as host, and Dr. Bill Slaughter reading an original poem composed especially for the occasion. The highlight of the program will be the recognition of the charter faculty and staff for their continuous service to the University community over its first 25 years. Each of the 70 founding faculty and staff will receive “birthday presents” as a thank you for their loyal service. Dr. Herbert will then cut the first piece of a very special birthday cake.

This is an event designed specifically for all of us. Faculty, staff, students, alumni and friends of UNF are all invited to mark this significant event in the life of our university.

Geraldine Collins, University Librarian

Time Capsule to be Presented

The UNF Silver Anniversary Time Capsule, donated by the Library to the University, will be presented at the October 2 party. All colleges, divisions and/or departments, as well as SGA have been invited to contribute an item to be placed in the time capsule. These items should be representative of the discipline, division, department or association.

Items included may be historical documents, predictions for the future, a course syllabus, admission requirements, an early roster of the faculty and staff, or any other item of significance that would add to the historical value of the gift. Examples of items already received include a catalog of courses for Fall 1997 from the Division of Continuing Education and a UNF recruitment video from Academic Affairs.

Library Extends Saturday Hours

Responding to popular demand, the Library is opening two hours earlier on Saturday mornings. The Electronic Library and Circulation Services are available from 8:00 a.m to 6:00 p.m. Reference and Periodicals service desks open at 9:00 and Media and Documents at 10:00. Please call for specific department hours.
Staff Spotlight

Lien Phan, Library Technical Assistant in the Serials Department, deserves the highest praise for an exceptional year's work. In the course of a normal day, Lien checks in up to 200 journal issues and prepares them for the Periodicals shelves.

In a special project, carried out over the last twelve months, Lien singlehandedly added bar codes to over 54,000 bound periodicals and added holdings information to LUIS. To perform this huge task, Lien edited a large computer file and reconciled long-standing problems. She then assigned bar codes to specific journal titles, physically pulled each volume from the shelf, matched the bar code with the journal, and inserted the bar code inside the volume.

One benefit of this project is that the library established a means to inventory materials and determine which, as well as how often, certain materials in the collection are used. This knowledge guides collection development activities and supports collection maintenance. An early report made possible by this project revealed that less than 1/4 of 1% of the journal collection is missing.

Lien has been a library employee since 1993. She immigrated to the U.S. from Vietnam in 1990 and became a citizen in March of 1996. Lien and her sister, Thuan Phan, who also works in the Library, are both UNF graduates.

This is a stellar example of the conscientious work performed behind the scenes every day by library staff.

Staff News

Long-time employee, Senior Library Technical Assistant Sally West is now working in the Cataloging Department after more than ten years in Acquisitions. Eddie Jones, a twenty year Navy veteran and radical Jacksonville Jaguars fan, is the new Senior Library Technical Assistant in Acquisitions.

Our dear friend and colleague, Joan Pickett, from Government Documents, retired from the University after thirteen years of service. All the best and many thanks for all you did for all of us, Joan!

John Lorio is the new Senior LTA in Documents. John is also an adjunct instructor in Language and Literature who brings many years of research experience to the position. Randy Miller accepted the part-time position formerly held by John. Randy recently earned a Master's degree in history at Florida State University while also working in the Science Library. With this impressive lineup of talented staff, researchers in Government Documents continue to receive exceptional service.

Margaret Kaus at Library of Congress

Associate University Librarian Margaret Kaus is on professional development leave during the fall semester for a special project at the Library of Congress. She is working in the Special Materials Cataloging Division cataloging long-playing analog discs from the Stephen Sondheim Collection and 78s from the John B. Seacrist collection. Margaret's work will make many rare items available in a national database.

This professional development allows Margaret to see how the Library of Congress formulates and implements the policies that are created for the rest of the library cataloging community.

Government Info Online

Local, state, and federal government agencies have long been interested in serving their customers better. Now they can. Enter CD-ROM and online information files. CDs offer vast amounts of data for pennies in production cost. The 1990 Census of Population had files never before available; for example, ZIP code data for census tracts -- unheard of ten years earlier. It keeps getting better: the Government Printing Office (GPO) is carrying out the Congressional mandate to become more electronically oriented over the next several years. Its web site, called GPO ACCESS, contains scores of hot links to executive agencies and the Library of Congress. The library web page will get you started and the Documents Web page (under construction) will offer several mega web sites (Villanova University and GPO Gate at Cal Berkley). City and state government are also getting on the superhighway. I invite you to come to the Documents Department and see for yourself.

Distance Learning Initiative Funds
FirstSearch Expansion

With the addition of 60 new research databases from FirstSearch, the UNF Library on the Web continues to grow. There are now over 100 electronic research databases available to library users. Over 2.5 million full-text articles can be printed, downloaded, or e-mailed to personal accounts by UNF researchers.

The FirstSearch databases and the online Encyclopedia Britannica described below are subsidized on our behalf for the current academic year by State of Florida funding of the Distance Learning Library Initiative (DLLI). Please encourage your students to use these services so they will be funded again next year! A list with descriptions of the databases is available at:

www.unf.edu/library/guides/bases.html

FirstSearch (OCLC, Inc.) features the prestigious WORLDCAT, a combined catalog of library holdings around the world. There are also over sixty research databases covering all subject areas, some with full-text articles and records, all available from home computers. This means that health sciences students can get to the popular CINAHL database from home. Business students can get full-text articles from ABI/Inform, Business & Industry Database and Business Dateline. Music students now have two choices of research databases: International Index to Music Periodicals and RILM.

FirstSearch also includes databases covering engineering, science and technology, current events, life sciences, etc. There is even the full text of the last 90 days of the New York Times newspaper - available from your office or home computer!

Britannica Online features the current electronic version of Encyclopedia Britannica as well as classic articles from previous editions. It also provides hypertext links to Internet resources. Britannica Online is available only in the Library at this time, but plans are to make it also available through remote access.

More Database News

WebLUIS

WebLUIS is the new World Wide Web version of the faithful old LUIS. Full-text articles are available from the WebLUIS versions of Business Index and General Academic Index. General Academic is the all-purpose, all-subject research database that is a favorite of Library faculty. It is an excellent database for freshman and sophomore students just beginning their research and as starting points for more in-depth research.

UnCoverWeb

UncoverWeb indexes articles from nearly 17,000 periodicals and is updated daily. This may be the resource to use for identifying recent articles. If UNF does not own the journal, the article can be ordered through Interlibrary Loan Services. If you need it immediately, Uncover will fax the article directly to you at your expense using your bank card.

LIRN is the Library's local area network where cd-rom databases are made available. These include several full-text databases. Business NewsBank Plus and NewsBank Reference Service give students the full text of articles from newspapers around the country. Ethnic NewsWatch provides the full text of newspapers, magazines, and journals from leading ethnic publications. Investext reports on publicly-held companies, while Tax Management Portfolios and RIA/Onpoint provide the necessary information for tax research.

Eureka

Eureka is a commercial consortium database provider featuring the combined library catalogs of the prestigious Research Library Group (RLG) and selected subject indexes. These indexes include architectural, anthropological, Hispanic American periodicals, foreign legal periodicals and the World Law Index.

Internet

The Library on the Web is the Carpenter Library's niche on the Internet. It is designed to serve the UNF community and to provide links to the best sites available.

Library Instruction

Imagine having to teach 12,000 students how to use these 100 research databases! So far this semester, over 41 classes and 843 students have attended seminars and instruction sessions in the Library. You are encouraged to fill out the instruction request form available in the library very early so we can reserve the date and time you need.
