JAZZ

On any given week New York can muster up an approximation of a non-stop jazz piano festival, what with the number of jazz piano rooms such as the Knickerbocker Saloon, Ziele's and the Carnegie Tavern and places that house resident pianists such as Barbara Carroll at Sennhans Bar or Junior Mance at the Village Gate on Sundays and Mondays.

But this week the jazz piano activity will be steam up even more than usual by the presence of several pianists who do not appear here frequently. Two who will be strangers to many New Yorkers are performing almost across the street from each other — Bobby Enriquez at the Cookery, University Place at Eighth Street, and Joyce Collins, a couple of blocks north at Bradley's, 70 University Place. Mr. Enriquez, a firey performer, has spent several years in the group led by Richie Cole, a saxophonist whose virtuosity seemed to urge Mr. Enriquez on to ever more dazzling performances. Miss Collins, a West Coast resident, has been heard at Michael's Pub singing and playing piano in a duo with Dave Mackay but her one-week appearance at Bradleys, with Red Mitchell on bass, will be her New York debut as a solo pianist.

Hanratty's, Second Avenue at 91st Street, which usually offers a single pianist, will have a double-header on Wednesday and Thursday when Dick Wellstood, who spends a large part of each year in the room, will be joined by Art Hodes, the Chicago blues pianist who makes only occasional flying trips to town but who will stay over to play the following week on his own. Joe Bushkin, who has often let years, even decades, go by between New York visits, will both play and talk, as is his custom, at the season's first "highlights in jazz" concert at the Loeb Auditorium on Wednesday at 8 P.M., assisted by Milt Hinton, Butch Miles, Howard Alden and Norris Turney.

MUSIC

Highlights in Jazz: Joe (nee Joey) Bushkin usually visits a ritziroom when he plays New York, so now downtown gets a chance to see the manic pianist, along with Norris Turney, Milt Hinton, Bucky Pizzarelli, Butch Miles, and others. September 21, Loeb Student Center, 566 LaGuardia Place, 598-3757. (Giddina)

Jazz figures

Guitarist Bucky Pizzarelli has been a standard in jazz circles for years, but a second generation is catching up. Pizzarelli and guitarist son John Pizzarelli Jr. will appear at 8 tonight at the NYU Loeb Student Center (506 LaGuardia Place, at Washington Square South: 598-3757) as part of the “Highlights in Jazz” series. They will be appearing as special guests of pianist Joe Bushkin and Friends, who are Milt Hinton on bass, Bobby Rosengarden on drums, Howard Alden on guitar, and Norris Turney on reeds. John, who sings as well as plays guitar, has done an album on Stash Records called, “I’m Hip (Please Don’t Tell My Father),” but we think his father knows, since John is backed on the record by the Bucky Pizzarelli Trio.

The Billy Taylor Trio—pianist Taylor, who is a frequent lecturer on the art of jazz; Victor Gaskin on bass, and Keith Copeland on drums—is playing at the Knickerbocker Restaurant (Ninth St. and University Place: 228-8490) through Oct. 1, Tuesday through Saturday. The sets begin at 10.

Autumn preview

Big band — and sharing a bill with the elder statesman of salsa, Tito Puente. The month ends with a gathering of talents: vibraphonist Gary Burton, bassist Steve Swallow, drummer Mike Hyman and the young pianist Makoto Ozone at Seventh Avenue South (at Leroy St.).

On into November, with pianists Marty Napoleon leading a quintet at Condon's, and trumpeter Woody Shaw and drummer-vocalist Grady Tate sharing an evening at the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

And that's just part of it. A special energy, yes — and special music in the most special of all cities.
