Jazz at Loeb Center

One of New York's longest-running jazz concert series, Highlights in Jazz, will celebrate its 15th anniversary tomorrow evening with a concert at New York University's Loeb Center. Among the musicians who will perform are Tito Puente (Latin percussionist), Phil Woods (alto saxophonist), Jon Faddis (trumpeter), John Pizzarelli Jr. (guitarist), Bob Mover (alto saxophonist), Tony Monte (pianist), Kenny Washington (drummer), James Williams (pianist) and at least one surprise star guest.

The nonprofit series was started in 1973 by Jack Kleinsinger, an Assistant Attorney General for the State of New York, at the Theater de Lys and moved the next year to the Loeb Center on Washington Square South. It presents eight concerts a year.

"Most of our concerts are unstructured, unhearsed jam sessions," Mr. Kleinsinger said yesterday. "I love jam sessions, but almost no one does them anymore." Tickets are $9 ($6.50 for students) and can be bought at the New York University box office. Information: 998-4999.
