25 years ago women were not significant party of the field of CS
- Few women scholars/researchers
- Very few police officers, judges, lawyers
- More jokes and parodies but still debates about women should/could handle male clients

- Hardly any interest in studying women as offenders as victims
- I know I ended up doing research for my thesis on a women's prison in 1971 not out of feminist zeal or gender spirit but because they wouldn't let me in the male prison had never had a female researcher and weren't going to start w. me!

First professional meeting I went to (SACSC) it was several hundred men and 2013 women!

On the one hand, not bad odds

But since I was presenting a paper on female offenders, it was in the end
an isolating experience

All the panelists you see here today have had similar experiences - all have been in the discipline for at least the past 25 years
- All are pioneers in the field in one way or another - some several times over!
- All happen also to have been among the first members of the Division on Women and Crime
- They are witnesses to the changes which have (in some cases slowly) taken place in the field in the past 25 years

And that is what they are here to share with us today:
their experiences of the changes, which have (in some cases slowly) taken place in the field in the past 25 years!
25 YEARS OF WOMEN IN CRIMINOLOGY

It has been about 25 years since scholarly concerns about the absence of research on women and crime—and possible bias in the substance of criminology—began to really surface in the literature in the early 1970s. It was also in the mid-1970s that growing numbers of women scholars, researchers and educators began to gather at American Society of Criminology meetings. Informal conversations among these women ultimately led to the formation of the ASC Women’s Caucus, which eventually became the Division on Women and Crime in 1984. This panel is devoted to an assessment of the effects of almost a quarter century of active participation by women in a discipline widely regarded as having been "male-dominated" in almost every respect. Has women’s involvement made any difference at all in the American Society of Criminology? in the academic professions? in the lives of persons of color? in the theory of our discipline? in the curriculum? Six women scholars, leaders and long-time ASC participants address these and other questions.

WOMEN AND CRIME SOCIAL HOUR
6:30 P.M.
FIFTH FLOOR - DENVER, HOUSTON, KANSAS CITY
Hi! At long last all the pieces seem to be in place for our upcoming ASC plenary session on "25 Years of Women in Criminology," which is scheduled for Wednesday, November 20, 1996 at 5:00--to be followed immediately by our traditional Social Hour. This memo is intended to outline what I think we all agreed to do for this plenary.

A copy of the program abstract and list of participants is enclosed. The repetitive (and dull, I admit) titles I submitted for each of your presentations gives some suggestion of what was intended. I seized on these titles (rather than requesting unique ones from you) in order to convey most clearly what we planned to do in this plenary. If you are affronted by this presumption on my part, I apologize and you are certainly free to rename your portion of the program when you speak. However, remember that the idea here is for each of the main presenters to briefly summarize what you believe are the changes (if any) which have occurred over the past two decades or so because of the participation of women in the fields of criminology/criminal justice with respect to your particular assigned portion of the discussion. The intent is to be both self-reflective as a Division, and informative for those of our colleagues who come to this plenary without much appreciation or understanding of the impact or meaning of women’s participation in this discipline.

Since the whole plenary session is only an hour long, it is critical for all of us to keep to a presentation which is only five to seven (5-7) minutes long. I will provide the welcoming and opening remarks, to be followed by each of the presenters, followed by a synthesizing discussion by Meda, and a closing sentence or two by me. In any remaining time, we will open the session to questions. By my calculation, if each of us uses our maximum of seven (7) minutes, our combined presentation would be at least 50 minutes long, leaving only 10 minutes for audience questions or commentary. Since things rarely go exactly as intended and most things take longer than planned anyway, I would prefer for us all to aim for a maximum of only five (5) minutes each, thereby reserving at least fifteen (15) or so for audience participation even if other things run over somehow. I hope you will all agree to this tight timetable; in my experience, it really means rehearsing what you want to say against a real clock, since (for me, at least) time flies when I am speaking! So be warned: I will take my job as chair’s time-keeper seriously and I will begin to harass you as you approach your outside (7 minute) time limits!

I think this is a wonderful opportunity to both assess for ourselves how far we have come and to share our insights with our less well informed colleagues. Let’s face it: some of our younger colleagues (and many of our students) think the battles for equality are all won, while some of our disciplinary peers still think women in the field are an anomaly. Sexual harassment is still alive (though at least it is now out of the closet) and women’s work in this field (as in many others) is still devalued by some of our colleagues. It is a good and important thing to reflect periodically on what our participation in this field has meant for the ASC, for academia, for persons of color, for the curriculum in criminology, and for criminological theory.

Well, I hope these thoughts help to clarify, or remind you about, what you agreed to do at the Plenary! By the way, in case you were wondering why the plenary title no longer makes reference to the 10th anniversary of the Division, it is because it turns out that we actually missed our 10th anniversary—it was back in 1994! But the idea for the plenary was so good, we decided to go ahead with it and just omit mention of the 10th anniversary.

If you have any questions, concerns or complaints about our plenary, please get back to me at your earliest opportunity at 904-646-2758/2850 (o), (h), 904-646-2540 (fax), or by e-mail at crasche@unf.edu. Otherwise I will look forward to seeing you in Chicago!

Dear Ray,

This is a belated response to your formal request for ideas for plenary sessions for the 1996 ASC program.

The enclosed ideas were generated by the Division on Women and Crime at our meetings last fall, and approved at our annual business meeting. We are very enthusiastic about doing some of these, either as plenary sessions or as other panel sessions sponsored by the Division.

Please note in particular our desire to do a plenary right before our Social Hour which we have held for the past several years on Wednesday evening; we would like to do the Plenary and then blend the Social Hour right after it, especially if we can to the Social Hour in some kind of adjacent space. We would ask you to give this idea particular consideration.

I have not fully fleshed out most of these ideas, because we were not sure which ones you would consider for the plenary slots. But I will be glad to finalize any of these ideas as soon as I know we can go ahead with some real planning. Finalizing them mostly means getting on the phone and contacting people to firm up their participation. I am also open to suggestions for modification in some cases as well, if it seems to you that some modifications would make these ideas more applicable to the larger ASC audience.

I look forward to your response to these ideas from the Division.

Sincerely,

Chris Rasche

Ideas for Special Panels for 1996

These are some ideas for special panels for the 1996 ASC meetings which might be sponsored by the Division. If we like any of these ideas, a committee (or person) would need to take responsibility for actually pulling the panels together and submitting them in a timely fashion through the ASC Program Committee. There could also be separate committees for each one of these ideas which we wanted to try to pursue. These ideas are not listed in any order of priority.

1. The Status of Women in Criminology: A 25-Year Retrospective
   Several ideas were floated here. The original idea was that the 10th Anniversary of the Division was a good time to take stock of where we have come from and where we are going. Perhaps we could propose this as a Plenary Session at 6:00 on Wednesday and follow it at 7:00 with our Social Hour in the same location or nearby, so that the two events blended together. Proposed contents have included:

   1. Have three main speakers: one on the changes for women in the ASC (such as Freda Adler or Barbara Price), one on changes for women in the profession (such as Marg Zahn, Merry Morash or Barbara Price), and one on changes in the curriculum on women and crime (such as Chris Rasche or Lynne Goodstein). Additional speakers who have since been recommended might include: Chinita Heard on the changes in the role of women of color, Mona Danner on her research on differences in the way male and female criminologists negotiate their contracts.

   2. Have two to four speakers representing the different waves of feminism since the 1960s, each talking briefly about what it was like to come into the profession during their "time." Follow this with break-out caucuses organized by "generation," each of which could be charged to come back (in 15 minutes? at another scheduled panel the next day?) with ideas about what their "generation" has to offer the Division and ASC and the profession in general. Or then reshuffle the group so that people of different generations are together for a second period of time (another 15 minutes?) Adjourn into the Social Hour.

2. Programs for Women Offenders and Victims in the Age of the "Contract for America"
   This panel idea was generated by the fact that the funding for many programs for women in prison or for female victims have been destroyed or are under potential attack. It seems like we just got programming for women offenders and victims out of the "dark ages" and now they are threatened again by the new wave of conservative politics. Perhaps have several speakers briefly describe what has happened to programming for women offenders and victims in a variety of areas (such as Angela Browne or Merry Morash on programs for women in prison, Meda Chesney-Lind on programming for delinquent girls, Brenda Miller on substance abuse programming for females, and others on women’s shelters, hotlines, etc.).

3. Translating Knowledge About Gender and Crime into Public Policy: Will We Be Ready When the Tide Turns?
   Some folks argue that all political climates swing back and forth, and someday the current repressive atmosphere will lighten up and there will be a new receptiveness for programming for women offenders and victims, for diversity in the workplace, for funding research on women, etc. How can the members of the Division be ready for the sea change? What do we have to do to be ready?
4. Fostering Diversity in Criminology in the Coming Decades
(to be co-sponsored with the Division on People of Color?)

The idea here was to set up a panel session to explore how diversity can be positively fostered, especially in academic and research settings, in the age of retrenchment of affirmative action. Are there positive models out there of institutions fostering diversity despite the likely demise of affirmative action? What can we learn from them? Are there ways to make lemonade out of what many people perceive as a "lemon" policy?

5. Feminist Theory: Where Have We Come From, What Have We Accomplished, and Where Are We Going in the Coming Decade?

Feminist theory has seriously challenged criminology at its very theoretical heart, but many people still don’t understand feminist theory. Perhaps this panel could provide some historical context (so we don’t have to repeat history), talk about the state of feminist theory today, and project the coming issues in post-feminist theory?

ANY OTHER IDEAS?
To: ASC Division Heads
From: Ray Paternoster, 1996 ASC Program Chair

I am in the process of preparing Plenary Sessions for the 1996 ASC meetings. I would appreciate any ideas, suggestions you may have on this matter. I cannot guarantee that I will act on all of your suggestions as we only have five or six slots for plenaries. In addition, if you have any suggestions for roundtables or author meets critics sessions, also please let me know. Thank you for helping me with this task.
To: ASC Division Heads
From: Ray Paternoster, 1996 ASC Program Chair

I am writing to remind you all of a pledge I made to each of you regarding panels at the ASC meetings in Chicago. To repeat, I said that you could form up to five panels of your own that would appear in the program. I would try to highlight these panels in the program book. If you take the opportunity to assemble any such panels, please send them directly to me, rather than one of the program committee persons. It would also help me for scheduling purposes if you gave me some idea as to the expected attendance. I would like to schedule anticipated well attended meetings large rooms. Thank you for helping me with this task.
ASC CALL FOR PAPERS

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF CRIMINOLOGY

ANNUAL MEETING 1996

NOVEMBER 20-23 1996
CHICAGO MARRIOTT DOWNTOWN

THEME: CONTROLLING CRIME AND ACHIEVING JUSTICE

The 1996 Annual Meeting of the American Society of Criminology will be held Wednesday-Saturday, November 20-23 in the "Windy City" at the Chicago Marriott Downtown. The theme for the 48th annual meeting is the twin challenge of controlling crime and achieving justice. The Program Committee welcomes submissions to panels and papers on the thematic topic and all issues related to crime and justice. The list of panel areas can be found in subsequent pages of this call for papers.

If you would like to present a paper, serve as a discussant or chair, or organize your own panel please submit your proposal to one and only one of the relevant area chairs. Please follow the provided submission details, and send it to the area program person before March 15, 1996. If you have a question about the location of your paper or panel, please communicate with the appropriate program person or to the chair of the Program Committee:

NEW EDITOR SOUGHT FOR CRIMINOLOGY

The American Society of Criminology invites applications for the position of Editor of CRIMINOLOGY, its official journal. The new Editor will be responsible for three volumes beginning with the February, 1998, issue. It is anticipated that manuscript submissions will transfer to the new Editor during the spring of 1997.

In addition to supervising the peer review process and selecting articles for publication, the Editor is responsible for the production of the journal. The American Society of Criminology now pays for copy editing, printing, and mailing of the journal and for a one-fourth time managing editor. The Editor's supporting institution normally provides office space, files, equipment, and funds to cover office expenses such as postage and phone for editorial correspondence, copying, graduate student assistance, and release time for the Editor. Supporting institutions may propose to assume some of the expenses now provided by ASC. ASC will provide a $5,000 honorarium to the Editor each year.

Application materials should include (1) assurances and details of institutional support, (2) a statement of editorial philosophy, and (3) resumes of all proposed personnel, including the Editor and Managing Editor, Copy Editor, and Associate Editors.

Interested applicants may contact the current Editor, Charles Tittle (509-335-4003), for additional information regarding the logistics or operational details of editing and producing the journal.

Applications (ten copies) should be sent to:

SUBMISSION DETAILS

- All submissions must be received by March 15, 1996.

- Please send your submission to just one program area chair. If the program area chair decides that another area is more appropriate for your submission, your forms will be submitted to the new area chair and you will be notified of the change.

- Please note that each participant is limited to a maximum of two program appearances. Four different examples of appearances include serving as a chair, paper presenter, or discussant.

- It is advisable that panels be limited to either four papers and a discussant or five paper presentations. Workshops usually include brief presentations involving more participants.

- All paper or panel submissions must include an abstract. In submitting your abstract, please limit it to 200 words. The abstract should only briefly note the purpose, method, and results of the study, or the general theme of the paper.

- Please note that the meeting is in NOVEMBER. Program participants are expected to preregister for the meetings. Preregistration materials will be sent to all participants by September of 1996. Failure to register may result in the removal of a paper from the program.

- Please submit papers that are original works that have not been previously published or presented elsewhere.

Thank you for adhering to these submission details.

The 1996 Meeting will begin each morning and end each afternoon with a plenary session. Panel presentations, roundtables, "author-meets-critic", and other sessions will be occur throughout each day. In addition to these sessions, there will be local tours of professional and personal interest, and, of course, the wonderful city of Chicago to enjoy during the evening. See you there!

Ideas for Special Panels for 1996

These are some ideas for special panels for the 1996 ASC meetings which might be sponsored by the Division. If we like any of these ideas, a committee (or person) would need to take responsibility for actually pulling the panels together and submitting them in a timely fashion through the ASC Program Committee. There could also be separate committees for each one of these ideas which we wanted to try to pursue. These ideas are not listed in any order of priority.

1. The Status of Women in Criminology: A 25-Year Retrospective
Several ideas were floated here. The original idea was that the 10th Anniversary of the Division was a good time to take stock of where we have come from and where we are going. Perhaps we could propose this as a Plenary Session at 6:00 on Wednesday and follow it at 7:00 with our Social Hour in the same location or nearby, so that the two events blended together. Proposed contents have included:

   1. Have three main speakers: one on the changes for women in the ASC (such as Freda Adler or Barbara Price), one on changes for women in the profession (such as Marg Zahn, Merry Morash or Barbara Price), and one on changes in the curriculum on women and crime (such as Chris Rasche or Lynne Goodstein). Additional speakers who have since been recommended might include: Chinita Heard on the changes in the role of women of color, Mona Danner on her research on differences in the way male and female criminologists negotiate their contracts.

   2. Have two to four speakers representing the different waves of feminism since the 1960s, each talking briefly about what it was like to come into the profession during their "time." Follow this with break-out caucuses organized by "generation," each of which could be charged to come back (in 15 minutes? at another scheduled panel the next day?) with ideas about what their "generation" has to offer the Division and ASC and the profession in general. Or then reshuffle the group so that people of different generations are together for a second period of time (another 15 minutes?) Adjourn into the Social Hour.

2. Programs for Women Offenders and Victims in the Age of the "Contract for America"
This panel idea was generated by the fact that the funding for many programs for women in prison or for female victims have been destroyed or are under potential attack. It seems like we just got programming for women offenders and victims out of the "dark ages" and now they are threatened again by the new wave of conservative politics. Perhaps have several speakers briefly describe what has happened to programming for women offenders and victims in a variety of areas (such as Angela Browne or Merry Morash on programs for women in prison, Meda Chesney-Lind on programming for delinquent girls, Brenda Miller on substance abuse programming for females, and others on women's shelters, hotlines, etc.).

3. Translating Knowledge About Gender and Crime into Public Policy: Will We Be Ready When the Tide Turns?
Some folks argue that all political climates swing back and forth, and someday the current repressive atmosphere will lighten up and there will be a new receptiveness for programming for women offenders and victims, for diversity in the workplace, for funding research on women, etc. How can the members of the Division be ready for the sea change? What do we have to do to be ready?
4. Fostering Diversity in Criminology in the Coming Decades
   (to be co-sponsored with the Division on People of Color?)

    The idea here was to set up a panel session to explore how diversity can be positively fostered, especially in academic and research settings, in the age of retrenchment of affirmative action. Are there positive models out there of institutions fostering diversity despite the likely demise of affirmative action? What can we learn from them? Are there ways to make lemonade out of what many people perceive as a "lemon" policy?

5. Feminist Theory: Where Have We Come From, What Have We Accomplished, and Where Are We Going in the Coming Decade?

    Feminist theory has seriously challenged criminology at its very theoretical heart, but many people still don't understand feminist theory. Perhaps this panel could provide some historical context (so we don't have to repeat history), talk about the state of feminist theory today, and project the coming issues in post-feminist theory?

ANY OTHER IDEAS?

IV. New Business, Issues and/or Ideas
   (discussion and debate only--we will vote on Friday as necessary)
   1. Proposal for a DWC Student Paper Competition - Kay Scarborough
   2. Plans for special panels for 1996 ASC (see attachment)
   3. 1996 will be DWC’s 10th Anniversary
      - do we want to celebrate or commemorate in some way? If so, a committee is needed.
   4. Visit of Jeremy Travis (NLJ Director) to our meeting on Friday
      - what do we want to tell him about the Division? or our interests? or our concerns?
      - what do we want to hear from him about NLJ
   5. Liaison with the new Division on People of Color and Crime
      - co-sponsor one of the special panels for 1996?
   6. New committees needed for 1996-97?
      - Programming Committee (to coordinate with the ASC Programming Committee, to plan the special panels for 1996)
      - DWC Constitution/Bylaws Revision Committee
      - An Archive Committee (or Archivist?)
      - A Publicity Committee (we will soon need a new membership recruitment brochure--and do we want to do other things to better advertise who we really are?)
      - Task Force on the Role of Men in the DWC

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLENARY SESSIONS FOR ASC 1996
FROM THE DIVISION ON WOMEN AND CRIME

Several ideas were floated here. The original idea was that the 10th Anniversary of the Division would be a good time to take stock of where the Division has come from and where it is going. We thought this could be a Plenary Session at 6:00 on Wednesday and then it could be followed at 7:00 with our Social Hour in the same location or nearby, so that the two events blended together. Additional speakers who have since been recommended might include: Cindra Heard on the changes in the role of women of color, Mona Danner on her research on differences in the way male and female criminologists negotiate their contracts.

2. Have two to four speakers representing the different waves of feminism since the 1960s, each talking briefly about what it was like to come into the profession during their "time." Follow this with break-out caucuses organized by each "generation" with a predesignated facilitator, each of which could be charged to come back (in 15 minutes? or at another scheduled panel the next day?) with ideas about what their "generation" has to offer the Division and ASC and the profession in general. Or then reshuffle the group so that people of different generations are together for a second period of time (another 15 minutes?) Adjourn into the Social Hour.

6. Transforming Knowledge into Action and Activism

A session about how academics and researchers can make a real-world impact on society and/or on the profession. A "workshop" format for learning about using the political sphere to translate research findings into social policy.
