October, 1982 Newsletter of the Division on Women and Crime

American Society of Criminology Division on Women and Crime.

Nanci Koser Wilson
This year's meeting in Toronto will be a benchmark for those whose special interest is women and crime. Just seven years ago (1975), and also in Toronto, the ASC sponsored its first panel of papers on women and crime. If memory serves correctly, Freda Adler chaired that panel and some seven papers were presented. 1975 was also the year in which the first two book-length modern treatments of the subject were published—Adler's Sisters in Crime and Simon's Women in Crime.

That first session was very well attended, so much so that a room change (to accommodate over 150 persons) was required. Still, the notion that there might be enough researchable material on the topic, or that the study of gender and crime might be central to criminology, was shared by only a few people.

Now in our eighth year, we have achieved status as a Division in ASC. The number of papers we will present has increased seven-fold, and there appears to be no question that what we are learning about the relationship between gender and crime is of major importance to criminology as a whole.

Perhaps the best testament to what has been so far accomplished is Parisi's (1982) statement that "Already it is an old refrain. Article after article begins with the trite comment that traditional research in criminology and criminal justice has ignored the female offender." What has been added to that traditional research is a body of literature large enough that the scholar has a difficult time keeping up with it. This year's collection of papers will add substantially to that body, and in turn reflect continued interest in growth. Well past the stage in which we saw the activities of women as unimportant, we now are systematically documenting those activities, exploring their meaning, and taking it for granted that they are important. We return to Toronto with much more than we could offer in 1975.

CONSTITUTION FOR THE DIVISION

A proposed constitution for the Division has been prepared, and will be presented to the ASC Executive Board for consideration at their meeting on November 3, 1982. This will be discussed at our Division meeting. Thanks go to P.J. Baunach for much hard work in preparing our first draft.
ACTIVITIES AT THE 1982 MEETINGS

Division Meeting

The meeting time for the Division on Women and Crime is Thursday, November 4, 1982, from 3:30-5:15 in the Windsor East Room. Please make time in your schedule to attend this important meeting. At that time we will discuss our constitution as well as other important matters.

Jointly-Sponsored Cocktail Hour

Women in ASC has sponsored a no-host cocktail party on the first evening of the convention for a number of years. This year we are proud to co-sponsor the event with the Division on International Criminology. The event will provide a cash bar in the Civic Ballroom from 5:30 to 7 p.m. on Wednesday, November 3, 1982.

Panels and Papers on Women and Crime

This year's meetings will feature 11 panels devoted exclusively to women and crime. A total of 47 papers will be delivered in these sessions. The majority of the papers will deal with women as offenders. The varied topics include: four sessions on the commission of crime by women, three panels dealing with the treatment of women offenders in the criminal justice system, including a fourth concentrating on criminal codes as they affect women. Two of the offender panels will deal exclusively with juvenile women.

Reflecting the widening interest of those studying female crime, the papers on offenders will include not only longitudinal studies of female crime, but also "interdisciplinary aspects," subcultures and crime and the interaction between sex, race and crime. The papers on treatment of females in the CJS will cover the entire range of the system from criminal codes to court processing, prison treatment, and parole decision-making.

Ten papers on women as victims will be presented, all of which deal with violence. Four papers focus on women as workers in the CJS. Varied topics include women as correctional administrators, as prison guards, as sentencing consultants and as jailhouse lawyers.

For the most part, Phyllis Jo Baunach has arranged these sessions so that they do not overlap. Thus those of us whose major interest is in female crime will be enabled to attend the majority of the sessions.

The varied topics of papers on women and crime reflect the fact that we have moved well beyond the early stages of development, and are now able to flesh out our observations on gender and crime with studies of specific topic areas, building on a base of information established in the last decade.

Also be on the lookout for papers which feature the impact of gender on crime in other sessions. While the Division has worked hard to establish eleven separate sessions on women and crime, it has been our belief since our inception that the long-term goal is the integration of the study of women into the larger criminological enterprise.

MISCELLANEOUS

If you have any items of business you wish to put on the agenda for the Division meeting, please contact Nanci Wilson at the above address.

If your mailing address changes, send that information to me also, as the mailing list is updated here twice a year.

We are still interested in collecting information on who is doing what kinds of research. Please fill out the attached form.
eleven separate sessions on women and crime, it has been our belief since our inception that the long-term goal is the integration of the study of women into the larger criminological enterprise.

MISCELLANEOUS

If you have any items of business you wish to put on the agenda for the Division meeting, please contact Nanci Wilson at the above address.

If your mailing address changes, send that information to me also, as the mailing list is updated here twice a year.

We are still interested in collecting information on who is doing what kinds of research. Please fill out the attached form.
ON-GOING RESEARCH CONCERNING WOMEN AND THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM

Information Form

Title of Research Project:

Institutional Affiliation:

Address:

Description or Abstract:

(If you have more than one research project in preparation, please enclose the same above information for each.)

Do you know of others doing research in this area? If so, please provide a name and address for each.

RETURN FORM TO: Dr. Nanci Koser Wilson
C/o The Division on Women and Crime/ASC
Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency, and Corrections
Southern Illinois University
Carbondale, IL 62901
ON-GOING RESEARCH CONCERNING WOMEN
AND THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM

Information Form

- Institutional Affiliation:

Address:

- Title of Research Project:

Description or Abstract:

(If you have more than one research project in preparation, please enclose the same above information for each.)

Do you know of others doing research in this area? If so, please provide a name and address for each.

RETURN FORM TO: Dr. Nanci Koser Wilson
                c/o The Division on Women and Crime/ASC
                Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency, and Corrections
                Southern Illinois University
                Carbondale, IL 62901
This year's meeting in Toronto will be a benchmark for those whose special interest is women and crime. Just seven years ago (1975), and also in Toronto, the ASC sponsored its first panel of papers on women and crime. If memory serves correctly, Freda Adler chaired that panel and some seven papers were presented. 1975 was also the year in which the first two book-length modern treatments of the subject were published--Adler's Sisters in Crime and Simon's Women in Crime.

That first session was very well attended, so much so that a room change (to accommodate over 150 persons) was required. Still, the notion that there might be enough researchable material on the topic, or that the study of gender and crime might be central to criminology, was shared by only a few people.

Now in our eighth year, we have achieved status as a Division in ASC. The number of papers we will present has increased seven-fold, and there appears to be no question that what we are learning about the relationship between gender and crime is of major importance to criminology as a whole.

Perhaps the best testament to what has been so far accomplished is Parisi's (1982) statement that "Already it is an old refrain. Article after article begins with the trite comment that traditional research in criminology and criminal justice has ignored the female offender." What has been added to that traditional research is a body of literature large enough that the scholar has a difficult time keeping up with it. This year's collection of papers will add substantially to that body, and in turn reflect continued interest in growth. Well past the stage in which we saw the activities of women as unimportant, we now are systematically documenting those activities, exploring their meaning, and taking it for granted that they are important. We return to Toronto with much more than we could offer in 1975.

CONSTITUTION FOR THE DIVISION

A proposed constitution for the Division has been prepared, and will be presented to the ASC Executive Board for consideration at their meeting on November 3, 1982. This will be discussed at our Division meeting. Thanks go to P.J. Baunach for much hard work in preparing our first draft.
ACTIVITIES AT THE 1982 MEETINGS

Division Meeting

The meeting time for the Division on Women and Crime is Thursday, November 4, 1982, from 3:30-5:15 in the Windsor East Room. Please make time in your schedule to attend this important meeting. At that time we will discuss our constitution as well as other important matters.

Jointly-Sponsored Cocktail Hour

Women in ASC has sponsored a no-host cocktail party on the first evening of the convention for a number of years. This year we are proud to co-sponsor the event with the Division on International Criminology. The event will provide a cash bar in the Civic Ballroom from 5:30 to 7 p.m. on Wednesday, November 3, 1982.

Panels and Papers on Women and Crime

This year's meetings will feature 11 panels devoted exclusively to women and crime. A total of 47 papers will be delivered in these sessions. The majority of the papers will deal with women as offenders. The varied topics include: four sessions on the commission of crime by women, three panels dealing with the treatment of women offenders in the criminal justice system, including a fourth concentrating on criminal codes as they affect women. Two of the offender panels will deal exclusively with juvenile women.

Reflecting the widening interest of those studying female crime, the papers on offenders will include not only longitudinal studies of female crime, but also "interdisciplinary aspects," subcultures and crime and the interaction between sex, race and crime. The papers on treatment of females in the CJS will cover the entire range of the system from criminal codes to court processing, prison treatment, and parole decision-making.

Ten papers on women as victims will be presented, all of which deal with violence. Four papers focus on women as workers in the CJS. Varied topics include women as correctional administrators, as prison guards, as sentencing consultants and as jailhouse lawyers.

For the most part, Phyllis Jo Baunach has arranged these sessions so that they do not overlap. Thus those of us whose major interest is in female crime will be enabled to attend the majority of the sessions.

The varied topics of papers on women and crime reflect the fact that we have moved well beyond the early stages of development, and are now able to flesh out our observations on gender and crime with studies of specific topic areas, building on a base of information established in the last decade.

Also be on the lookout for papers which feature the impact of gender on crime in other sessions. While the Division has worked hard to establish eleven separate sessions on women and crime, it has been our belief since our inception that the long-term goal is the integration of the study of women into the larger criminological enterprise.

MISCELLANEOUS

If you have any items of business you wish to put on the agenda for the Division meeting, please contact Nanci Wilson at the above address.

If your mailing address changes, send that information to me also, as the mailing list is updated here twice a year.

We are still interested in collecting information on who is doing what kinds of research. Please fill out the attached form.
ON-GOING RESEARCH CONCERNING WOMEN
AND THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM

Information Form

Name: ____________________________

Institutional Affiliation: _______________

Address: ____________________________

Telephone: __________________________

Short Title of Research Project: __________

Description or Abstract: ____________________________

(If you have more than one research project in preparation, please enclose the same above information for each.)

Do you know of others doing research in this area? If so, please provide a name and address for each.

RETURN FORM TO: Dr. Nanci Koser Wilson
c/o The Division on Women and Crime/ASC
Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency, and Corrections
Southern Illinois University
Carbondale, IL 62901
This year's meeting in Toronto will be a benchmark for those whose special interest is women and crime. Just seven years ago (1975), and also in Toronto, the ASC sponsored its first panel of papers on women and crime. If memory serves correctly, Freda Adler chaired that panel and some seven papers were presented. 1975 was also the year in which the first two book-length modern treatments of the subject were published—Adler's Sisters in Crime and Simon's Women in Crime.

That first session was very well attended, so much so that a room change (to accommodate over 150 persons) was required. Still, the notion that there might be enough researchable material on the topic, or that the study of gender and crime might be central to criminology, was shared by only a few people.

Now in our eighth year, we have achieved status as a Division in ASC. The number of papers we will present has increased seven-fold, and there appears to be no question that what we are learning about the relationship between gender and crime is of major importance to criminology as a whole.

Perhaps the best testament to what has been so far accomplished is Parisi's (1982) statement that "Already it is an old refrain. Article after article begins with the trite comment that traditional research in criminology and criminal justice has ignored the female offender." What has been added to that traditional research is a body of literature large enough that the scholar has a difficult time keeping up with it. This year's collection of papers will add substantially to that body, and in turn reflect continued interest in growth. Well past the stage in which we saw the activities of women as unimportant, we now are systematically documenting those activities, exploring their meaning, and taking it for granted that they are important. We return to Toronto with much more than we could offer in 1975.

CONSTITUTION FOR THE DIVISION

A proposed constitution for the Division has been prepared, and will be presented to the ASC Executive Board for consideration at their meeting on November 3, 1982. This will be discussed at our Division meeting. Thanks go to P.J. Baunach for much hard work in preparing our first draft.
eleven separate sessions on women and crime, it has been our belief since our inception that the long-term goal is the integration of the study of women into the larger criminological enterprise.

MISCELLANEOUS

If you have any items of business you wish to put on the agenda for the Division meeting, please contact Nanci Wilson at the above address.

If your mailing address changes, send that information to me also, as the mailing list is updated here twice a year.

We are still interested in collecting information on who is doing what kinds of research. Please fill out the attached form.
ON-GOING RESEARCH CONCERNING WOMEN
AND THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM

Information Form

Name: ____________________________

Institutional Affiliation: ____________________________

Address: __________________________________________

__________________________

__________________________

Telephone: ____________________________

Short Title of Research Project: ____________________________

Description or Abstract: ____________________________________________

__________________________

__________________________

__________________________

__________________________

(If you have more than one research project in preparation, please enclose the same above information for each.)

Do you know of others doing research in this area? If so, please provide a name and address for each.

RETURN FORM TO: Dr. Nanci Koser Wilson
c/o The Division on Women and Crime/ASC
Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency, and Corrections
Southern Illinois University
Carbondale, IL 62901